The Canine Good Citizen test is an AKC program developed to demonstrate responsible dog ownership. The test evaluates a dog on the everyday manners that enable it function in today's society. The test is open to all dogs, both mixed breeds and purebreds.

Dogs awarded the Canine Good Citizen certificate have proven that they can: accept a friendly stranger; sit politely for petting; permit a stranger to room/examine them; walk on a loose leash; walk politely through a crowd; sit, down, and stay on command; come when called; behave politely around other dogs; be confident when faced with distracting sounds and sights; and can be left by the owner for a brief period without showing undue stress.

A Canine Good Citizen certificate recognizes those dogs and owners who have worked to ensure that the dog is a pleasure to own, and are members in good standing with the community.
